It's easy for you to be counted.

Every 10 years, the United States counts everyone who lives in the country, regardless of age, nationality, or ability. It is important for everyone to respond to the 2020 Census so that communities like yours can receive the funding they need for health care, accessibility services, and more.

The 2020 Census is accessible for everyone.

You can respond to the census today by answering a handful of questions online, by phone, or by mail.

The online questionnaire is accessible to people with a wide range of disabilities.

If you prefer to respond by mail, you can complete the questionnaire, which was included in a mailing from the U.S. Census Bureau.

If you have blindness or low vision, you can print a guide to the questionnaire in braille or large print from 2020CENSUS.GOV.

If you have deafness or a hearing loss, you can:

- Respond to the census using telephone devices for hearing impaired.
- Access video guides to the questionnaire in American Sign Language on 2020CENSUS.GOV.
- View online videos and webcasts with closed or open captioning.
- Request a visit from a census taker who uses American Sign Language.

United States® Census 2020

D-OP-GP-EN-126 Updated May 2020

2020CENSUS.GOV is a 508-compliant website accessible to people with blindness or low vision, deafness or hearing loss, learning disabilities, cognitive limitations, limited movement, photosensitivity, and various combinations of these.

Census takers will visit households that have not yet responded and can assist if you need help completing your form.

Responding helps influence funding for your community.

The 2020 Census will influence community funding and congressional representation for the next decade. Information collected in the census will inform the allocation of more than $675 billion in federal funds for states and communities each year. That includes money for things like:

- Medicare and Medicaid
- Temporary Assistance for Needy Families
- Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP)
- Education programs
- Public transportation
- Libraries

Responding is safe.

Your personal information is kept confidential by law. Your responses can only be used to produce statistics. They cannot be used for law enforcement purposes or to determine your personal eligibility for government benefits.
